You are fortunate to have a world of information available literally at your fingertips.

In order to thoroughly research and educate yourself about any topic, you must read about the subject in a variety of different academic and scholarly sources. Do not “just Google it” and select whatever sites pop up at the top of the list. If you want to perform a web search, I recommend the search engine RefSeek \(www.refseek.com\), which is designed for students and produces more academic search results. However, you should supplement your research by using all available databases, e-books and print resources.

Doing research is like going on an information treasure hunt. Follow the clues by clicking on links that may lead to further information. Also, check the references included at the end of articles or books to find additional resources.

Happy Reading!! Mrs. Walkins

Print Resources

I have pulled out some books I believe will be helpful for this project. Use the the SJP online public access catalog to search for additional print resources.

Suggested Titles:

Ancient Rome (937 MAR)

Living in Ancient Rome (937 LIV)

World Religions Reference Library ( R 200 WOR)

A Celebration of Customs & Rituals of the World

(394.2 ING)

Britannica Online

The Britannica online encyclopedia is an excellent place to begin your research. The articles will provide a general overview of your topic, as well as links to additional resources. Acquiring some general knowledge about your topic will enable you to create a list of search terms to use as you delve deeper into the subject. Access our subscription to Britannica through the Learning Commons page on the SJP website.

E-Books

In addition to our print resources, we also offer e-books on our E-Point Bookshelf (username = msjlib password = eagles1885) and our FollettShelf on the LC website. Each student has a Follett account (user name = firstname.lastname password = sjp e-mail password). You can read the books online or borrow and download them onto your computer/iPad. Some helpful titles for this project include:

Exploring the Life, Myth and Art of Ancient Rome (E-point Books)
Encyclopedia of Greek and Roman Mythology

Britannica Encyclopedia of World Religions

Databases

You can access the Gale Databases on the Learning Commons website. Each database includes numerous articles from reputable scholarly journals and magazines which will provide valuable information.

World History in Context
World History Collection

General OneFile
Religion and Philosophy Collection

Citing Images

You must provide a citation for any images you use in slide shows or other presentations. When you are looking for images, it is best to use sites that offer free-use images like:

Edupics.com

[Encyclopedia Britannica](http://Encyclopedia Britannica).

Photosforclass.com

Temple of Saturn. Image. Britannica School, Encyclopædia Britannica, 1 Nov. 2017.

You can also find free use images on Google images by doing an advanced search (click on settings) and filtering the results for "free to use or share" under usage rights.

MLA Documentation Style

When quoting from, paraphrasing or using the ideas contained in an article, book or other resource, you must give proper credit to the author by citing the source both in the text of your paper and in a list of Works Cited on the last page.

We use the MLA (Modern Language Association) documentation style at SJP. In a handbook the scholars at the MLA spell out certain formatting and citation rules you must follow on all research projects.

Purdue University's Online Writing Lab website is a great resource to use when creating your Works Cited page and formatting your research paper.

Practice Template From MLA Handbook (8th ed.), published by the Modern Language Association (style.mla.org).	Author.
